

LOAVES & FISHES
FAMILY KITCHEN

Jordan's Story and Loaves & Fishes' Impact

"I felt like my life came full circle from receiving nourishing meals from Loaves and Fishes as a child to being able to return as an adult to prepare meals for the next generation of those in need."

At Google we have an opportunity to donate our time to local non-profits in the area. I joined a team of 30 Google employees to spend a day at Loaves and Fishes. We were able to make hundreds of meals for the underserved in our community. Since I'm usually behind a keyboard all day long, being able to work with my hands and help our community was a refreshing change of pace. I had a great time figuring out how to make the best meals as efficiently as possible. I had a great time giving back to the organization that does so much for our community.

While I had a great time at the event, the experience was also an emotional experience for me because it reminded me of my childhood. I felt like my life came full circle from receiving nourishing meals from Loaves and Fishes as a child to being able to return as an adult to prepare meals for the next generation of those in need.

Growing up in a single parent household, resources were scarce. Shortly after I was born, my mother was diagnosed with terminal ovarian cancer. Times were tough, our family went through bankruptcy, and just being able to keep the lights on became a struggle. Some of my earliest memories were going to churches and other non-profits for food, clothing, and financial support. One place our family could count on for support was Loaves and Fishes.

We received support, but more importantly, we were treated with dignity and respect by the great staff at Loaves and Fishes. For this, I will always be in debt to this great organization.

At an early age, I loved to read, tinker on computers, and work on mini side-ventures such as washing cars, trash pick-up, sales at flea markets, computer repair, and multiple failed lemonade stands. I was exposed to technology at an early age and this had a tremendous impact on my development. Growing up in Silicon Valley, it was hard not to hear about all of the great things tech companies were doing. However, I felt that coming from a low income community and being a person of color, were obstacles to entering tech, since there are so few of us in this field.

When I graduated from Santa Clara University, I was featured in a news story that led to my employment at Google. To work at a company that is committed to organizing the world's information and making it universally accessible no matter your education, ethnic background, or economic status is truly an honor. More importantly, the company's dedication to advancing underrepresented minorities and women has inspired other companies to champion the cause of diversity.

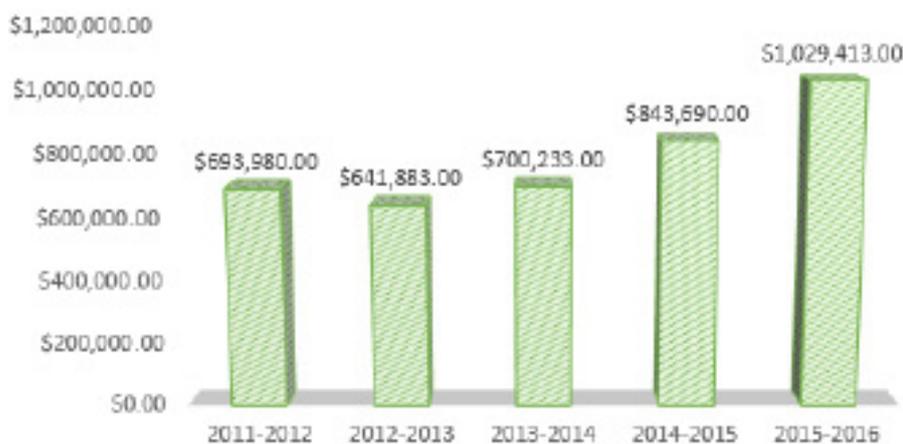

We take a lot of things for granted in Silicon Valley, and it's hard to imagine that many people in our community struggle to afford food. And yet the 12 person staff at Loaves and Fishes serves almost 400,000 meals per year – and the need is greater still. The organization remains true to its commitment of financial discipline by minimizing its administrative overhead to maximize how many meals they serve per year. As a testament to Loaves and Fishes' dedication to the needy, they have recently been nominated as a finalist for the Drucker Prize. You have an opportunity right now to make a direct impact in the lives of many people in our community. With a small donation of five dollars you can provide a poor family with a meal.

By the numbers... A BIG THANK YOU!

Loaves & Fishes chosen a semi-finalist for Drucker Innovation Award

Out of 495 applicants, 50 organizations were deemed by the first-round judges to have best met Peter Drucker's definition of innovation—"change that creates a new dimension of performance"—in order to make a meaningful difference in the lives of the people they serve. Loaves & Fishes Family Kitchen is one of those organizations!

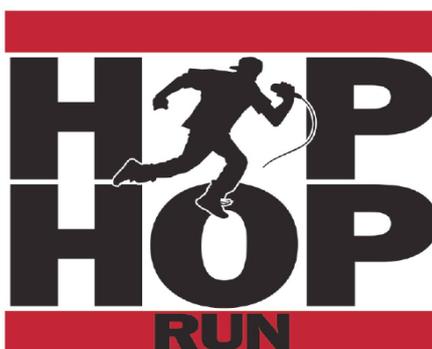

Loaves & Fishes now has the opportunity to participate in round two of the application. The ultimate winner of the Drucker prize award will receive $100,000!

"We are pleased to advance these 50 promising semi-finalists to Round 2, where they will have the opportunity to learn from some of the brightest minds in the social sector, and then demonstrate how they might further leverage the discipline of innovation going forward," said Zach First, the executive director of the Drucker Institute. "One organization will win $100,000 in the end—but everyone will walk away with powerful new knowledge." Loaves & Fishes is honoured to be selected among some of the nation's finest organizations and to be recognized for our work by the world-renowned Drucker Institute. Getting to the next round is validation that this is a unique organization with a remarkable staff.

The winner of the $100,000 Drucker Prize will be announced on September 30.

Hailed by Businessweek magazine as the "man who invented management," Peter Drucker not only consulted for major corporations; he also advised countless other social-sector organizations. He called the non-profit "America's most distinctive institution."

IRA CHARITABLE ROLLOVER RULED PERMANENT

The law uses the term "qualified charitable distribution" to describe an IRA charitable rollover. A qualified charitable distribution is money that individuals who are 70½ or older may direct from their traditional IRA to eligible charitable organizations. The provision has a cap of $100,000 for charitable distributions from individual IRAs each year. Individuals may exclude the amount distributed directly to an eligible charity from their gross income. On December 18, 2015, President Obama signed the PATH Act, making this special provision permanent.
